There's so much we want to share with these kids!

This week is all band for three hours a day. What a wonderful time for you child to be nurtured in his growing understanding of music. This time in his musical life can be a time of decisions. Is this for me?—Will I ever be able to play over the break?

Everyone isn't out to transform their child into a Herbie Hancock or a Jean Rampal, but most people are interested in building a mental discipline and a sense of accomplishment in their child that a motivating musical experience can provide.

As much as we know the kids will benefit from this clinic, we know our Lakota band program and other area band programs can benefit from students who are just a little more motivated, knowledgeable and inspired to be the best musicians they can be.

At The Lakota Summer Band Clinic, we cater to those students who need that little something extra to spark some greater musical insight, or to provide an added incentive.

In addition to professional instruction, your child can talk to Lakota High School band students, who will relate just what your child is in store for in just a few more years—how band becomes more exciting and challenging—and just how much their playing ability will change and improve. This can be encouraging because, although these students are older, they have not-to-distant memories of being where your child is right now.

You can give your child more than a musical instrument. You can give her an extra opportunity to feel encouraged and confident in her musical ability—to realize she is a musician!

When is a musician truly a musician?...

...After he plays Carnegie Hall, or maybe earns a solo in the high school band?

Actually, from the first day your child brings home that saxophone or shiny new trumpet, it's important for him to think of himself as a musician.

That's why at The Lakota Summer Band Clinic for Seventh, Eighth and Ninth Grade Instrumentalists, we provide these budding musicians with a motivating musical experience. It can give them an added boost to increase confidence in their musical abilities.

At The Lakota Summer Band Clinic, your child will enjoy a summer band experience with students from other schools in Northern Cincinnati. It's an opportunity to meet other kids who are the same age, may play the same instrument and may be as excited about their instrument as your child—or they may share a common difficulty.

Lakota band directors, well-known throughout the state for their award-winning bands, will lead the week-long clinic. In addition to full band sessions, your child will:

- ◆ Benefit from a daily private/semi-private lesson.
- ◆ Participate in sectionals with other students who play the same instrument.
- ◆ Play in a closing ceremonies concert.
- ◆ Receive a T-shirt.
- ◆ Receive instructional material designed to give him/her insights on becoming a better musician.
- ◆ Listen to live and recorded professional musicians play on their instrument type.
